Miss McCreery to Wed Judge Graham

A wedding of unusual interest especially in Tampa and Ocala will be solemnized tomorrow morning in Nashville, Tenn., when Miss Sarah Elizabeth McCreery will become the bride of Judge W. S. Graham. The engagement of this popular couple has been known since Christmas by their intimate friends, but was only announced formally a few weeks ago by the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John McCreery at their Nashville home and since then a great deal of interest has been manifested by their friends throughout Tennessee and Florida. Miss McCreery taught in the Ocala High School for a number of years and while here made her home with Miss Meta Jewett, who is now in Nashville for the wedding. She was a member of the reading club and the young ladies' card club and was the chief promoter in organizing the Agatheridan Society, the literary club of the high school. The last three winters she has taught in the Hillsborough school, Tampa, and has likewise endeared herself to a large number of pupils and friends. She has frequently made able addresses before the teachers' association, which convenes annually during Christmas week, and is conceded to be one of the most brilliant educators in the state. Judge Graham is a prominent barister of Tampa. He has a host of friends in club, business and social circles who extend to him congratulations and best wishes. Judge Graham will, after an extended wedding trip, take his bride to Tampa, where a home in all readiness is waiting. Their Ocala friends anticipate a short visit from them on their way home.

GRANDMA SAYS

That there is sometimes an old fellow in a neighborhood that can spoil more lovmaking than all of the old female gossips in the locality.

That it is not necessary for some people to go around preaching and praying for the salvation of souls. The people who have souls and are able to work generally manage to take care of themselves.

That a certain pretty widow declares that she will never marry again and there is an old fool bachelor in her neighborhood who says she will. Options in regard to the outcome are soon to be placed on the market.

That the matrimonial market has taken a decided slump during the last ten days, but there may be something doing later on.

That hot weather makes the refreshment merchants happy, but it does not the young and impecunious man who has an adorable maiden on his hands.—Orlando Sentinel.
